Underage driver hits 3: Police

Oshawa. A truck carrying teens was being chased when it struck pedestrians during Pride Week

Three people apparently celebrating Oshawa's Pride Week were rushed to hospital — one in critical condition — early Sunday after a truck carrying young teens and being pursued by officers roared up onto a sidewalk, police say.

A 39-year-old man, 27-year-old man and 32-year-old woman had just left Out Lounge and Bar and were standing on the corner waiting to cross the street, said bar manager Blaise Gelinas, when a black Ford F150 driving the wrong way hit them.

The three youths, two 13-year-olds and a 15-year-old, were taken into custody after a short foot pursuit, and the Special Investigations Unit was called in to investigate because the crash happened during a police chase.

Durham Regional Police said officers had been called just before 3 a.m., following a report of a vehicle driving erratically. Upon their arrival the truck sped off, hitting the victims, police said.

They were taken to Lakeridge Health in Oshawa with serious injuries — the woman suffered a broken hand and internal injuries and the 27-year-old man has soft tissue and head injuries. The other man was transported to St. Michael's Hospital and is in critical condition with an arm fracture and internal injuries.

SIU's lead investigator confirmed none of the teens had driver's licences due to their ages.

No charges had been laid as of Sunday evening.

Man killed in confrontation with police

A man allegedly armed with a knife died Saturday evening after he was shot in a confrontation with police in Scarborough.

Shortly before 6 p.m., police were called to Adanac Drive, near Eglinton Avenue East and Markham Road, for a disturbance involving an "emotionally disturbed person," said a Special Investigations Unit investigator speaking to reporters at the scene.

"He was allegedly armed with a knife and shots were fired," the investigator said.

Family of missing Canadian man doubles reward

The family of a Canadian man missing in Australia for nearly a month has doubled the reward for finding him to $100,000.

Police scaled back their search in late May due to poor weather, prompting Srawn's family to offer first $15,000, then $50,000, to anyone who "rescues or recovers" him.

GO train commuter arrested, fined $135

Holding the door. Metrolinx claims transit user 'put everybody else at risk'

A frustrated evening commuter is furious after she was arrested at Union Station and slapped with a $135 fine for wedging her hand in the door of a train to stop it from leaving.

Francine Leriche, a Mississauga mother of two, said she was rushing home for a family gathering on Tuesday at 6 p.m., when the incident occurred.

"I was totally incredulous. And the more I thought about it, the angrier I got," said Leriche. "It was absolutely excessive and uncalled for."

The provincial government worker said she grew frustrated waiting about half an hour for the Lakeshore West GO Train to show up. When the train pulled in, she said the doors in front of her closed sooner than the others, so she stuck her hand in to hold it open.

After a transit officer approached her in a "very brusque and very insistent" manner, she was handcuffed and escorted to a nondescript back room, where she was later released and ticketed $135 for interfering with the "ordinary enjoyment" of the transit system.

Disbelief

"... I was defiant, and ... I was mouthy. (But) I was in no way threatening them ... or anyone around me."

Francine Leriche, who was arrested while waiting for the Lakeshore West GO train

Metrolinx spokesperson Anne Marie Aikins confirmed the arrest and ticketing took place. "Sometimes people do things that put everybody else at risk, and we have to take action," she said.

Aikins said GO train drivers were unable to pull out of the station Tuesday because of an alert that a door hadn't properly shut. When officers went to check it out, they found Leriche with her "foot and hand" wedged in the door. She was trying to board the train, said Aikins. "She just kept saying there was room for her and she wanted to get in."

When Leriche refused to remove herself "many times," the officers arrested her and ticketed her for a "mischief" offence, said Aikins.

Dedicated bike lanes on Sherbourne the start of a downtown network

Cycle commuting. $2.5M in upgrades separate cyclists from motorists

For the first time in its history, Toronto can lay claim to having dedicated bike lanes when they officially open on Monday morning.

For Michele Cossette, it might spur her to start using her bike to get to work. Cossette, 27, says it's too dangerous to cycle to work, but the new dedicated bike lanes on Sherbourne Street will bring much-needed safety. "There still needs to be a good east-west route," she said.

However, as part of $4.1 million in upgrades along the street, the $2.5-million bike lanes will provide a north-south route for the growing number of cyclists downtown.

"We use them all the time," said Meldon Lobo, 27. "Sherbourne is in much better condition than it used to be."

Curbs and a painted buffer strip separate bikes from cars. Street parking has been lost, but delivery zones are provided.

Lobo said the city should better educate drivers and cyclists on how the lanes work. Lobo, who lives on Sherbourne, said he hears squealing tires all the time from drivers unaware of the new lanes and the four-inch curbstones that separate them from the road on the northern stretch of the lanes.

The Sherbourne lanes are the east route in what public-works chairman Coun. Denzil Minnan-Wong said will be a square network of dedicated lanes downtown. Designs for Wellesley Street have been completed and he said construction will begin later this year. Richmond and Adelaide bike lanes will be constructed next year.

The west-side route to complete the square network is still under debate, he said.

"There are those on the margins who are unwilling to adapt, and I'm talking about people who park and block the lanes, and that's just rude. The vast majority of cyclists and motorists will be supportive of the bike lanes." Coun. Denzil Minnan-Wong, public-works chairman

I'm no Premier Schoolmarm: Wynne

Kathleen Wynne says she's not being Premier Schoolmarm by imposing a dress code on her staff.

Wynne's office has prohibited booty shorts, muscle shirts, halter tops, spaghetti straps, miniskirts and ripped jeans as summer office attire.

"There's always been a dress code," Wynne said on Sunday at the Portugal Day parade on Dundas Street West.

Her comments came after a memo surfaced that was sent to all Liberal aides reminding them of proper decorum at Queen's Park.

"I just think it's good for people to know what we share as a common understanding of how we should dress. It's a professional environment and I just want to make sure that everybody understands what that means," Wynne said.

Still, the 60-year-old premier conceded that in her younger and more rebellious years, she went to the barricades for fashion rights.

"There are people who taught me in high school who will be laughing because my first political action was to say women should be able to wear pants to school," she said.

Verizon story source outed at his own request

The Guardian. Ex CIA employee Edward Snowden, 29, said his motive was to 'inform the public'; NSA seeks criminal investigation

A former CIA employee and National Security Agency contractor is the source of The Guardian's disclosures about the U.S. government's secret surveillance programs, the British newspaper reported Sunday.

The leaks have reopened a debate about privacy concerns versus heightened measures to protect against terrorist attacks, and led America's NSA to ask for a criminal investigation.

The Guardian said it was publishing the identity of Edward Snowden, 29, a former technical assistant for the CIA and current employee of defence contractor Booz Allen Hamilton, at his own request.

"My sole motive is to inform the public as to that which is done in their name and that which is done against them," said Snowden.

The NSA has been collecting the phone records of hundreds of millions of Americans. President Barack Obama has said the programs have been authorized by Congress and are subject to supervision. "What I can say is that in evaluating these programs, they make a difference in our capacity to anticipate and prevent possible terrorist activity."

Journalism. U.S. state snooping story prompts debate on source protection

A scandal over state snooping on journalists in the United States is prompting media-watchers to consider new techniques to protect sources.

Anonymity of sources is considered sacrosanct among journalists and essential to their safety, reputation, and ability to act as public whistle-blowers.

But journalists are lagging behind when it comes to protecting sources in the digital era, critics say.

"There is a general lack of awareness (among journalists) about what ubiquitous surveillance looks like," said Jonathan Stray, who teaches at Columbia University. Everything from the websites you visit, the calls you make, and even your phone location are logged somewhere, Stray said. The same applies to reporters. Whistle-blowers are at particular risk. A week ago, The New Yorker unveiled Strongbox — a secure way for people to leak information to them.

Defence survey to shed light on silent crime

Results of an anonymous survey to be released in the fall by National Defence will shed more light on the extent of military sexual assault, including what has been called the silent crime of male-on-male rape.

Almost 68,000 troops, 86 per cent of them men, were asked last year to voluntarily complete the Canadian Forces Workplace Harassment Survey. It asks their gender, years of service and rank, along with 100 questions ranging from personal harassment to whether they've been raped. It's the first such survey since 1998. Results could provide valuable insight into the extent of sexual violence in the Canadian military — an issue that former soldiers and others say is rarely reported. The extent to which men are sexually assaulted by other men is even more cloaked in silence, they say.

South Africa prays for 'father of nation'

Nelson Mandela. Anti-apartheid leader battles grave infection; in serious condition

Nelson Mandela received visits from family members on Sunday at a hospital where the former president and anti-apartheid leader was being treated for a recurring lung infection, while South Africans expressed their appreciation for a man widely regarded as the father of the nation.

There was no official update on 94-year-old Mandela after his second night in the hospital. His condition was described as "serious but stable" on Saturday.

The office of President Jacob Zuma had said that Mandela was taken to a Pretoria hospital after his condition deteriorated at around 1:30 a.m. on Saturday.

The anti-apartheid leader has now been taken to a hospital four times since December, with the last discharge coming on April 6 after doctors diagnosed him with pneumonia and drained fluid from his lung area.

Mandela was freed in 1990 after 27 years as a prisoner of white racist rule and won election to the presidency in all-race elections in 1994. He retired from public life years ago and had received medical care at his Johannesburg home until his latest transfer to a hospital. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Canada celebrates decade of same-sex marriage

Ten years ago, their unprecedented wedding stood for hope, equality and inclusion.

A decade later, Michael Leshner and Michael Stark — Canada's first legally married same-sex couple — believe the battle to have their union recognized by the courts has made it easier for today's lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender Canadians to feel accepted.

"Once you have marriage you have full equality. That was won that day," said Leshner.

The pair's quick civil ceremony in Toronto came just hours after Ontario's Court of Appeal pronounced the Canadian law on traditional marriage unconstitutional on June 10, 2003.

While Ontario was the first to legally recognize same-sex marriage, many other provinces followed soon after. Two years later, the federal government legalized same-sex marriage countrywide with the gender-neutral Civil Marriage Act. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Turkish PM's taunts bring more protesters to streets

After the speech. Tens of thousands pack into Taksim Square; thousands more flood Ankara's central square

In a series of increasingly belligerent speeches to cheering supporters Sunday, Turkey's prime minister launched a verbal attack on the tens of thousands of anti-government protesters who flooded the streets for a 10th day, accusing them of creating an environment of terror.

Recep Tayyip Erdogan made the most inflammatory of his speeches as he arrived in the capital, Ankara. Erdogan belittled the protesters, again calling them "capulcu," the Turkish word for looters or vandals. He made his speech in Ankara on an open-top bus, which then drove into the city in a motorcade.

Anti-government protesters have turned Erdogan's label of them as "capulcu" into mocking slogans, printing stickers with the word, scrawling it on their tents and uploading music videos onto social network sites.

China. Nobel laureate's wife calls brother's jailing vendetta against family

A court sentenced the brother-in-law of China's imprisoned Nobel Peace Prize winner Liu Xiaobo to 11 years in prison Sunday — an unusually harsh punishment for a business dispute that Xiaobo's wife immediately decried as a vendetta against the whole family.

The court in suburban Beijing found Liu Hui guilty of fraud in a real estate dispute and issued the sentence after a brief hearing.

Liu Xia, the defendant's sister and the Nobel laureate's wife who is herself under house arrest but who was allowed to attend the trial, wept as she briefly stood and spoke to reporters outside a car that was bringing her home from the hearing.

Family members and their supporters have said the prosecution of Liu Hui is meant as further punishment of the Nobel laureate's family and is intended to intimidate other political activists.

Lawyers for the brother said he and another business partner were accused of pocketing 3 million yuan (about $500,000) that was claimed by another party to the transaction. According to the lawyers, the money has since been returned, and police after first investigating the case last fall dropped it and then revived the charges early this year.

Federal agency stops investigating deadly anthrax

Canada's food regulator is no longer getting involved in cases of anthrax, a disease that can kill cattle, bison, other grazing animals and, in rare cases, people.

The Canadian Food Inspection Agency says it will no longer investigate and quarantine anthrax-infected farms, collect samples for testing, vaccinate livestock or oversee and help pay for the cost of disposing animals that die of the disease.

New rules that went into effect this spring say livestock producers, with the help of private veterinarians, are expected to take responsibility for preventing and dealing with anthrax. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Skirting the issue

Swedish train driver Martin Akersten poses wearing a skirt in Stockholm on May 31. Akersten says he and more than a dozen other drivers and conductors in the Swedish capital have started wearing skirts in the summer as a protest against train company Arriva's uniform policy, which doesn't allow shorts. An Arriva spokesman says the company wants its staff to look "nice and proper," but can't stop men from wearing "women's clothes" if that's what they want because it would be discrimination. # San Francisco. iRadio music service, iOS update expected at Apple conference this week

Apple is expected to reveal a digital radio service and changes to the software behind iPhones and iPads on Monday as the company opens its annual conference for software developers.

Apple hasn't said what it will unveil at the Worldwide Developers Conference in San Francisco. But the major announcements are expected during Monday's keynote presentation.

Last year, Apple used the conference to announce its own mapping service, better integration with social networks and improvements to virtual assistant Siri. It also announced thinner MacBooks with high-resolution screens. The conference runs through Friday.

This year, Apple is expected to show off a simplified look on iPhones and iPads. If the speculation is correct, it would be the most radical design change since the iPhone made its debut in 2007, showing consumers that phones could do much more than make calls and exchange messages.

Monday's highlight is expected to be an updated version of iOS, the software that runs iPhones, iPads and iPod Touches. It will be called iOS 7 and will come with new devices expected to go on sale this fall. Owners of recent models such as last fall's iPhone 5 will likely be eligible for free upgrades.

OUR CITY WORKS BETTER TOGETHER

URBAN COMPASS

Matt Elliott
toronto@metronews.ca

There's a certain type of Torontonian who looks at all the city's problems and comes up with one simple solution: De-amalgamation.

It doesn't seem to matter what the problem is. A transit system mired in under-funding and endless debates about expansion? De-amalgamate. Regular downtown-versus-suburban ideology clashes over things like bike lanes and social services? Oh, you better believe that's cause for de-amalgamation. A scandal-prone conservative mayor gets elected with the support of a mostly-suburban bloc of voters called "Ford Nation"? Well, hey, it must be time for De-amalgamation Nation.

It's not.

Sure, amalgamation came from a ridiculous process. When the provincial government forced together Old Toronto, Scarborough, North York and Etobicoke in 1998, they ignored the express will of the people and promised major cost savings that no one has been able to deliver on.

But it's done.

As others have noted, all de-amalgamation would do now is separate the population in uncomfortable ways.

The Old City of Toronto is becoming less diverse and more wealthy, while the suburbs have more frequently become the landing point of a diverse group of newcomers.

It's sort of hard to stick to Toronto's motto of "Diversity, Our Strength" if we're talking about cutting up the map.

And besides, it's not clear what de-amalgamation would even look like.

As former mayor David Crombie is fond of pointing out, Toronto has been absorbing other municipalities and amalgamating for most of its history.

Do we go back to the semi-amalgamated Metro government that had its own set of problems? Or do we go back further, to the days when Swansea and Leaside and even Parkdale were their own municipalities?

A better idea would be to accept our current government and try to make it work better than it has.

To do that, we need to look at ways the amalgamated government can function better.

Start with this: Amalgamated Toronto's government is unwieldy and poorly structured such that local, neighbourhood issues become city-wide issues.

Next week, the full Toronto City Council will vote on items as tiny as turn restrictions and liquor licences. Downtown councillors will get a say in whether a property in Scarborough gets rezoned. There's no need for that.

Local issues should be decided at the local level. Residents should feel like they have a direct link to their representatives in government who are making the kinds of decisions that affect them.

That's hard to do if some guy halfway across the city is calling the shots.

This kind of governance change could take many forms — further empowering community councils, even creating ward councils — but the end result should be the same: Let's stick together as an amalgamated city, but let's make the amalgamated government work better.

Bake sale to benefit SickKids. Former patient giving back to hospital

News worth sharing

Media will always have to report on the tough stuff. But we know that Canada is full of compassionate people, inspiring projects and stories worth celebrating. Here's just one:

Twelve-year-old Kevin Costa has always had a soft spot for the Hospital for Sick Children. Growing up, he'd heard the story of how, as a toddler, he'd been rushed to the hospital in a medical emergency. For three days, Kevin remained under the staff's careful watch, and was restored to full health.

Maybe it is his parents' ongoing gratitude to the hospital, or his memory of all the spare change they'd collect to donate to its causes, but now Kevin wants to "thank SickKids."

He is launching his own fundraising bake sale, and encouraging others at his school and in his community to join him.

"I hope to influence more children to do something small to make a difference," he said.

For Aaron Downey, head of curriculum development at High Park Day School, Kevin has become a role model for his fellow students.

"It's fabulous to have somebody like Kevin who's going beyond the classroom to do something that's spreading a really positive message," says Downey.

Kevin's bake sale will be held on Saturday, June 15, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. in front of High Park Day School, located at 291 Jane St. in Toronto.

All proceeds will be donated to The Hospital for Sick Children.

George Stroumboulopoulos' new CNN talk show premiered Sunday night. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Strombo brings style to CNN

Network sea change.
New mandate and management has the purveyor of American news looking to branch out into new territory

It's a safe bet that George Stroumboulopoulos will be the first male CNN personality to wear two earrings and a skull ring from a designer who made one for Keith Richards.

Stroumboulopoulos, whose new nighttime talk show premiered Sunday, is more curious than dangerous, though.

The show gets a solid time slot for its debut, airing after the season finale of Anthony Bourdain's successful Parts Unknown. Then it will settle into a regular spot on Fridays at 11 p.m. Eastern for the summer and, if things go well, maybe beyond.

This is part of CNN's attempt to branch out beyond news programming at certain times, represented most prominently by Bourdain's show. The effort started before the arrival of new network boss Jeff Zucker — Stroumboulopoulos had his first contact with the network last summer before Zucker arrived — but the enthusiasm continued with the change in management.

Stroumboulopoulos already hosts a nightly talk show on the CBC, where his friendly style seems to encourage celebrities to open up.

"I hope that people pick up something new about the person I'm interviewing and find out a way to relate to them," he said. "I want them to find a connection."

For CNN, the show represents an old style for a new generation. Stroumboulopoulos, 40, said his interest in politics was fuelled less by politicians than by listening to the Clash and Public Enemy. He's eager to interview Snoop Lion, the former Snoop Dogg, on his show because he considers him such an important figure in hip-hop.

Rap artist Wiz Khalifa, comic Martin Short and actor Keanu Reeves were the guests on his first show.

Other confirmed interviews for the show's 10-week run include Betty White, Bill Maher, Sharon Stone and filmmaker Werner Herzog.

The show will tape before a studio audience in Los Angeles. Stroumboulopoulos said he's not gunning for the job of CNN's other general interview program, Piers Morgan, and said he likes the way Morgan conducts interviews.

For the moment, he'll fit the CNN show in with a schedule that includes the CBC show (which airs twice in the evening) and a weekly music and talk program he does for a CBS radio station.

"This is what I do," he said. "I don't even have any dependents in my life. I don't even have a plant."

Aquirre-Sacasa's weird past with Archie

Aguirre-Sacasa, who's also a playwright and Marvel Comics writer, has an interesting history with Archie Comics. One of his first plays, originally titled Archie's Weird Fantasy, was about Archie coming out of the closet. After legal action was threatened, the Atlanta production was changed to Weird Comic Book Fantasy with the characters' names changed. Aguirre-Sacasa is now obviously on much friendlier terms with Archie Comics. He's also writing a zombie series titled, Afterlife With Archie.

Archie film in works

Betting on the big screen. The iconic comic characters are poised to get a real-life makeover

How will Archie translate into a feature film? THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Archie's old Riverdale gang is headed to the big screen.

Warner Bros. will produce a live-action film based on the comic's characters, including Archie, Betty, Veronica and Jughead, Archie Comics announced.

It will be the first feature film for the 72-year-old comic.

Directing will be Jason Moore, who helmed the 2012 high school musical comedy Pitch Perfect. Glee writer Roberto Aguirre-Sacasa is penning the script.

In an interview Thursday, Aguirre-Sacasa said the present-day film will be "a quintessential teen movie."

"The idea for this is to capture a very truthful, authentic coming-of-age story with these kids that includes heartache, that includes pain, that will obviously temper the fun and the hijinks," said Aguirre-Sacasa.

"It's going to be a fun — hopefully — summer movie, but we're not shying away from the truth and the awkwardness and the growing pains of being a teenager."

The Archie comics have previously spawned several animated TV series since the 1960s. In 1990, NBC aired the TV film Archie: To Riverdale and Back Again.

"There are parts of the story that I think people will be surprised how dark and real it gets," says Aguirre-Sacasa.

Let's go ride a bike

Welcome your kids to the wheel world

YummyMummyClub.ca CEO and avid Cadbury Bicycle Factory supporter Erica Ehm speaks to the unexpected education one can acquire on a bicycle.

What can young ones learn from getting on a bicycle for the first time this summer?
The first bike ride is a real bonding moment between parent and child. It's really their first big opportunity for independence. It's a very special moment. It can be tough for them at first — but it teaches persistence and fitness. It's a very important message to instill in your kids, that it's important to go out and play. METRO

In Africa, bicycles have a profound impact on students' lives. A bike can cut travel time to school by up to four hours a day.

- The Cadbury Bicycle Factory is an initiative that has built more than 18,000 bicycles to help students in Africa get to school every day.
- By playing a free online game, kids can prompt Cadbury to continue to donate the individual parts that will make up a full bicycle for a student in need.

Want to be healthier? Juggle

New study. Our expert weighs in on a report claiming moms who work outside the home enjoy better mental and physical health

IT'S ALL RELATIVE
Kathy Buckworth, kathybuckworth.com

Women who have kids and work full time have been found to have better mental and physical health by 40. ISTOCK

A recent survey found women who worked full time outside the home after having children had better mental and physical health by age 40 than those who had not.

This has of course raised interest, as one might assume that working full time while managing a family would be more stressful, and stress is a known factor in contributing to mental and physical challenges.

It would appear that this isn't necessarily accurate. Why would this be?

Personally, I'm not entirely surprised by the findings. I think Albert Einstein had stay-at-home moms in mind when he defined the word "insanity" as "doing the same thing over and over again and expecting different results."

Have you ever been at home with young children? Have you tried to get them to clean up their rooms, pee into the toilet or stop hitting their sister?

No matter how many times they are told (clearly it is not "nagging" when it is simply giving them excellent advice), the outcome is often the same.

Nothing changes. At least not immediately, and not without years of bribing and threats.

Add to that the fact that my research (I drove around a bit) shows that there isn't a big list moms can carpool to at the end of the day in order to check off: a) continued successfully raising child, b) ensured food was edible and in good portion size and c) minimum health standards were met.

Many moms at home just don't get to feel that sense of accomplishment that comes with actually moving something forward and affecting change. Not in the short term, at any rate, and one of the most distressing things a parent of young children can hear from parents of older children is that it "never gets easy."

There's no such thing as a performance review when you're on the home front: except for the ones you get from snarly teenage girls who aren't necessarily focusing on your positive attributes, as the ones in a professional work environment might. Unless, "You suck" is now a good thing in the way that "that's so sick" has become. (I do try.)

The reward system for moms at home also leaves something to be desired. In that there really isn't one, except for the playground high fives you exchange with a friend when your kid wasn't the one kicking someone else off the slide.

Compare this to the workplace, where most employees can expect to be treated with a modicum of respect, have performance reviews which don't include door slamming (to be fair, there aren't any doors in most cubicles), and best of all, they get to take on new responsibilities with the positive achievement of old ones.

Being relieved at duties you've perfected is something moms at home never get to experience. Until the kids are the ones to leave home, that is.

Kicking it off once the cap comes off

The parties, the pictures, and now, a profession? How to get your game face on after graduation

For post-secondary graduates receiving degrees and diplomas in the weeks ahead, excitement over completing their programs may be tempered by the grim job landscape for Canada's young people.

The latest labour force survey from Statistics Canada revealed a decline of 19,000 jobs for youth aged 15 to 24 in April. The youth unemployment rate was at 14.5 per cent last month, little changed compared to a year earlier and more than double the national average. "When you see numbers like that, it can often give you the impression there really aren't many jobs available in your area," said Shirin Khamisa, a Toronto-based career counsellor and founder of Careers by Design.

"Be very realistic and realize there is a general climate where there are less jobs, but that doesn't mean you won't be able to secure a job that's right for you."

Khamisa and other experts share two ways for job-seeking grads to distinguish themselves in a competitive job market and work toward kick-starting their careers.

Build a network

Do you have any professional contacts in your area of study or field of expertise? If not, there's no time like the present to start making connections.

Graduating can be exciting ... and a little nerve-racking. Looking for job leads? Try networking with industry professionals. ISTOCK

Attending industry events, joining a professional umbrella organization or engaging with individuals working in the field to ask about key needs in their area — and how you can fill them — could help build your network, said Khamisa.

"That's the really powerful thing in a job search when it's a tighter market — to get that face time with people who are in the field you'd like to work in."

Another good way to obtain information and build a network is through informal interviews, said Bruno Castilloux, manager of career services at the University of Ottawa.

He suggested researching the company of interest to craft precise questions before calling to speak briefly with a representative to learn more.

Keep connected

While many people will be keen to "jump right into job-search mode," Khamisa said that's not the best way to start a relationship with a potential contact. Khamisa said the job search should be a time of exploration. It's often easier when individuals are initially seeking out information and learning about a particular industry and the needs of an organization before hunting for a specific position, she noted. "Reaching out and connecting takes courage ... and I guarantee you there will be times where people don't get back to you or are just too busy or aren't receptive," she said.

"But the magic happens when you persevere and you keep going. And eventually, you will connect with a group of people who will help you and support you as you move forward." Khamisa added she once had a client who developed 10 contacts through cold calling. She continued to keep in touch over several months and ended up getting three different job offers. Placing a phone call isn't just limited to maintaining professional contacts.

When individuals reach the stage where they're submitting applications, a followup call is another way to show initiative, said Danielle Bragge, a partner with The Headhunters, a Canadian recruitment firm. It doesn't have to be aggressive. The process can be as simple as an introduction, mentioning your interest in the opportunity you've applied for and highlighting three quick reasons you'd make a great addition to the team, Bragge said.

Nadal rolls to historic win at Roland Garros

Rafael Nadal became the first man to win eight titles at the same Grand Slam tournament when he beat fellow Spaniard David Ferrer in the French Open final Sunday, 6-3, 6-2, 6-3.

Nadal broke the men's record for match wins at Roland Garros, where he improved to 59-1.

Tragedy strikes at race in Montreal

A race-track worker at the Canadian Grand Prix was killed Sunday after he slipped under the wheel of a crane at the end of the Formula One event.

Officials said the man was escorting the crane as it moved Esteban Gutierrez's car, which did not finish the Montreal race.

The accident occurred shortly after Sebastian Vettel's win. Officials did not immediately release the identity of the victim, but hospital officials said he was a volunteer at the track. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Heat overpower Spurs to draw even in finals

NBA playoffs. Heat turn hotly contested Game 2 into blowout with high-octane fourth quarter

Game 2

| 103 | 84 |
| Heat | Spurs |

LeBron James overcame a terrible start to finish with 17 points, eight rebounds and seven assists and the Miami Heat rolled to a 103-84 victory over the San Antonio Spurs on Sunday night to even the series at a game apiece.

Mario Chalmers scored 19 points for the defending champion Heat, who trailed late in the third quarter before going on a 30-5 run to take control. Chris Bosh added 12 points, 10 rebounds and four assists.

Danny Green scored 17 points on 6-for-6 shooting and Tony Parker had 13 points on 5-for-14 shooting with five assists for the Spurs, who turned the ball over 17 times after tying a finals record with only four in their Game 1 victory.

Game 3 is Tuesday night in San Antonio.

Dwyane Wade added 10 points and six assists for the defending champion Heat, who were down 62-61 with under four minutes to play in the third quarter and in danger of falling into a serious hole in their bid to repeat.

Tim Duncan and nine points and 11 rebounds, and Kawhi Leonard had 14 rebounds, including eight on offence, for the Spurs, who shot 41 per cent.

James missed eight of his first 10 shots and was 3 for 13 after three quarters, and the Spurs led 62-61 on a layup from Green with less than four minutes to go in the third. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MLB. Blue Jays blow a gasket with Rangers on the ropes

The Texas Rangers used the long ball to get in position for a comeback win on Sunday.

A lack of focus from Toronto slugger Jose Bautista in a big ninth-inning situation helped them seal the victory.

Nelson Cruz, David Murphy and Adrian Beltre homered as the Rangers scored six unanswered runs in a 6-4 victory over the Blue Jays at Rogers Centre. Texas (37-25) salvaged the finale of the three-game series and ended Toronto's three-game winning streak.

The Blue Jays (27-35) had the potential winning run at second base with one out in the ninth and Bautista at the plate.

The Toronto slugger didn't like a called strike by umpire Gary Darling and it appeared to rattle him for the rest of the at-bat. When Bautista struck out, he jawed with the umpire and was ejected from the game.

Manager John Gibbons said he's not concerned that his slugger might be getting a bad reputation with umpires.

"It doesn't help him, that's for sure," Gibbons said. "But it really hasn't been a problem this year. Today it kind of blew up but look over the season, it really hasn't been an issue. So we've just got to move on."

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
Try to realize that not everyone thinks or feels the same way as you. A clash of viewpoints is likely today but it will only be a problem if you insist that you are right and others are wrong.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
You may prefer to stick with what you know and trust today rather than take a risk on something new. That's up to you, of course, but it's also a shame because a little bit of courage could change your life completely.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
Keep telling yourself that the changes now taking place are not nearly as bad as some people claim. As a matter of fact they could actually be beneficial, for you anyway, so make sure you have a positive attitude.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
You are not as conformist as some people think and what you do over the next few days will prove that fact several times over. Expect a bit of a backlash though.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
Try not to give too much away today, especially on the work front where knowledge is most definitely power. The less others know about what you are up to the more likely it is your efforts will be a success.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
For some reason you are a bit more aggressive than usual, which could lead to confrontations at home and at work.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
It's time to get serious about your long-term aims and that means, inevitably, getting rid of certain short-term aims that eat up your time and your energy.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
The planets will smooth your path as the new week begins and you will find it quite easy to get your way both in the professional sphere and in your private affairs.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Try not to let little things annoy you today because if your temper gets the better of you there is no telling where it might lead. Whatever other people might say or do treat it all as a big joke.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
If a commitment of some sort is not working out then maybe you should cut your losses and get out. It won't be easy but let common sense (and the contents of your wallet) guide you.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Some things can be put off indefinitely because they are not really important but you have been putting off something that MUST be forced through to a conclusion. Make this the week when you finally crack it.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
Yes, all things are possible but don't get silly and change things for the sake of it today — chances are you will just have to change them back again later. SALLY BROMPTON
